I am having trouble understanding this documentation Specifically what do the numbers indicate? I know I need to add this information to my Django project. I am wanting to fetch the user created token from my project. My token is the above token. Also in the project I am receiving the above request parameters. A: It is referring to the HTTP protocol. Hence is a GET request for You can also specify the request type by using the method = 'GET' in your urls.py. Such a protection arrangement, in particular for ignition systems of motor vehicles, is already known from U.S. Pat. No. 4,739,513. In this arrangement, the protection of the firing units is effected by means of a monitoring system in which the parameters monitored are a battery voltage of the engine, a battery voltage of the firing circuit, and the firing current flowing via a protection resistor in the firing circuit. Additionally, a minimum firing current value is used as a criterion for starting. If the protection against electric breakdowns is not guaranteed in this known protection arrangement, then this procedure cannot be employed.Q:

Q: Swift 4: How to add space between elements in collection view for different screen sizes I am currently having issues with creating a collection view for my app. I have set up each section to contain 4 or 5 images. They all fit fine on a phone, but when I add them to my app it looks and feels very messy on a tablet. Each element is too close together. I've read that it might be caused by the aspect ratio, but I can't work out what to do about it Currently the aspect ratio of my view looks like this: width: (content width) height: (width+(content height)) So, if the content width is 100px, this would be: width: 100px + (content height) I want to get the content height to be 100px when in portrait mode, and not when in landscape. I have tried adding this in the class: override var intrinsicContentSize: CGSize { return CGSize(width: self.collectionView?.frame.width?? 0, height: self.collectionView?.frame.height?? 0) } But this hasn't resolved the issue. How would I be able to adjust the size of the collection view cells to fit the view better? Thanks. A: Try defining this in your storyboard by giving your collectionViewController a "Content height" constraint of (Intrinsic height). This will give you more flexibility in your view's frame to control the spacing between the elements. Example: That way if you try to "size up" your controller from the main storyboard you will see the blue outline around the controller rather than the deprecated "black" outline.
