In Pictures: 616: The Year in Food It is no secret that food is not high on the social agendas of the average Westerner. Most would agree that food just has to get on with doing its thing, while we all engage in activities much more worth our time, like chopping down trees and writing a blog post. This year, in our ongoing quest to break the mold of the average foodie, we have released the first edition of '616: The Year in Food', where we will profile 616 of the best restaurants, bars, hotels and events in Sydney and beyond. 616 has been created to highlight some of the best food-based events happening in the city – be it a 4-H competition at the Martin Place Market, live music or even a Dozen Roses (a running event held at Botanic Gardens, followed by a dinner at Oporto's). We may have just begun, but in the six months to June, we have had the chance to visit and sample the offerings of some great restaurants, bars and even a few food-related events and festivals. We are lucky enough to live a stone's throw from some of the most incredible restaurants in Sydney. This is something we are very proud of, but even we know that when you travel, it can be hard to find the right '616'. So, let's start this year's journey on a high – we have just launched this year's first edition of '616: The Year in Food'. The real quest to 'Find the 516', no matter how much you try to avoid it, begins when the year comes to an end. As we would like to get to know every single foodie in Sydney, we will endeavour to visit them all. This is why this year's list is so big, and why we're calling it an editorial. We're so confident that we have identified some of the best dishes around, that we are going to give you a chance to share your best in #616Feedback on Twitter. Join the Twitter conversation and nominate your favourites, or let us know your thoughts on what we're missing out on. What are you most looking forward to in 2016? Let us know!

What's New in the?

Talking about something else... Is there a correlation between wearing Converse shoes and being a sailor? I just saw a commercial for Delta Airlines where someone's telling a story about his first flight. He said that when he was young, and did not know anything about aircrafts, he was afraid of flying. But, once he was seated and was faced with something going wrong on his flight, he began to realize that this was not a problem – it was an opportunity! Thus, he became all gung-ho about his first flight. When I saw the commercial, I thought, 'How nice!' – there is a case made for the fact that being able to laugh at yourself is good. But then I started thinking, 'What about if his first flight went right?' So, I looked up the commercial and it turns out that the person was a sailor... We're lucky in Christchurch to have some talented artists and musicians. They paint and create beautiful paintings, enjoy playing in bands, and compose wonderful music. Their talents are exceptional and I'm absolutely thrilled to be able to showcase a few of their works on the site. The present invention relates to new and useful improvements in fishing rods, reels and spools. The components of fishing rods and reels constitute a complex of elements which are made of different materials and are assembled into a fishing rod or a reel by way of a number of processes which, especially in the case of reels, can involve the making of a number of hand operations which may require the use of tools. This invention is concerned primarily with the mounting and assembly of the parts of a reel. In the case of a conventional fishing reel with a bobbin, the two halves of the bobbin are glued together to provide the bobbin. This is normally carried out by applying a thin coating of glue to the ends of the halves, then bringing them together in precisely the correct relative position, and pressing the parts together to spread the glue so as to secure the parts together into a single reel. In a known device for carrying out such operations, illustrated in FIGS. 1 and 2, the device comprises two fixed rails 1, 2 on which the two halves of the bobbin are placed in precisely the correct position and secured in place by a thin, flat gluing tool 3 which is pressed into the ends of the pieces. In operation, the tool is removed after
